Nixon Will Sell Grains to Russia As Unions Relent

By Frank C. Porter

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5 (UPI)—A surprise deal between the White House and the big maritime unions has paved the way for sales of grain to Russia that could run as high as $185 million, it was announced Friday.

Such a sale would not only exceed the total of all U.S. exports to the Soviet Union last year—$118 million—but would also top the historical record of $125 million worth of wheat to the Soviet Union in 1964, in winning labor acquiescence to removing the requirement that 50 percent of such shipments be moved in American vessels, the Nixon administration pulled off a coup on several fronts:

The projected sale to Russia would help reduce the heavy surpluses from this season's bumper crop and firm up prices. The drop in corn from $1.45 a bushel a year ago to about $1.05 today has brought angry protests from farm groups and has become a serious political liability for President Nixon.

The White House agreement not only puts American growers on a more competitive basis with other major exporters, such as Australia and Canada, but would be of significant help to the critical trade and balance-of-payments situation of this nation.

American grain traders believe this would be only the first of continuing grain shipments to Russia, which is hard pressed to grow enough feed for its rapidly expanding livestock industry. The sale might also help pave the way for expanded export of other products to the Soviet Union, officials believe.

No American grain has been sold to Russia for the past eight years because of the hang-up over the 50 percent shipping requirements. American shipping charges generally exceed world rates, and the Russians have balked at paying the extra cost ever since the big wheat deal of 1963-64.

In June President Nixon suspended the shipping requirement at the same time that he liberalized trading rules for mainland China. There were loud protests from organized labor at the time, and intimations that the International Longshoremen's Association might refuse to load any grain cargoes destined for Communist nations.

Quid Pro Quo Denied Administration officials said the union leaders had asked nothing in return for finally acquiescing to removal of the shipping preference. They praised the union chiefs' "statesmanship" for putting the interests of the nation first.

But speculation persisted, nonetheless, that some quid pro quo was arranged during the White House parley: the pledge of more vigorous prosecution of Mr. Nixon's case.

World at large was to leave the Pope entirely free to draw his own conclusions from the debate. The Pope is due to address the synod tomorrow at its closing session.

Many bishops are themselves puzzled by the decision not to publish the final documents for general consumption. But they suggest that the main reasons are to be found both in widespread dissatisfaction over the texts and, even more so, in procedural confusion.

Irritation over the synod's procedure, with its complicated voting system, erupted yesterday into a heated exchange, which marked the synod's first departure from the practice of set speeches into parliamentary-style debate.

The issue was the delicate question of whether married men may be ordained priests in special cases where the church is suffering from a grave shortage of clergy. In a vote on the priesthood document earlier in the week, the bishops had overwhelmingly voted to preserve the law of priestly celibacy.

Ukrainian 'Synod' Ends Rome, Nov. 5 (UPI)—Ukrainian Catholic bishops announced today that they have ended what they called a synod, convened by exiled Josef Cardinal Slipyi in defiance of a Vatican ban.

Pope Paul VI met in private audience today with the Most Rev. Ambrosij Senskyj, Ukrainian Archbishop of Philadelphia, one of five men named to a permanent Ukrainian synod. But there was no statement of what they discussed.

34 Senators Bid Nixon Bar A-Test, Blast Foes Get High Court Hearing

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5 (UPI)—As conservationist groups awaited Supreme Court action on their appeal to halt tomorrow's Amchitka Island atomic test, 34 senators today asked President Nixon to block the five-megaton, $290-million explosion.

The Supreme Court agreed to give a hearing tomorrow to the arguments of the conservationists, who say that this largest underground blast in U.S. history may destroy marine and bird life and cause earthquakes and tidal waves, even though the explosion will occur 6,000 feet underground.

Meanwhile more politicians, scientists and organizations came out in opposition to the detonation of the bomb—250 times stronger than the one that destroyed Hiroshima in World War II.

There were these developments: Led by Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R., Mass., the 34 senators said in a telegram to Mr. Nixon that they were "united in the feeling that no reason proffered thus far justified the hostile act of unimaginable power that is about to take place."

Three Nobel Prize winners and nine other scientists said there was "a real possibility" that Mr. Nixon made a mistake in approving the test and "he should allow sufficient time for full public and congressional debate."

The scientists included Nobel prize winners Linus Pauling of Stanford University, Harold Urey of the University of California and George Wald of Harvard.

Eight organizations that carried their long legal battle to the Supreme Court on grounds that the explosion created environmental dangers said, in a letter to Mr. Nixon, a letter reproduced as an advertisement occupying a full page in The New York Times, that a substantial part of the scientific community believed the test involves "significant environmental risks."

The senators wrote Mr. Nixon: "The force of the blast will be so great that there is a small though palpable risk of earthquake, tidal wave and radioactive contamination of the ocean."

Family at Blast Site ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Nov. 5 (AP)—The chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, James R. Schlesinger, will have his wife and two children on Amchitka Island with him when the nuclear test is held tomorrow. The family's presence is designed to demonstrate his "high degree of confidence," in the AEC's safety precautions, he says.

Mr. Schlesinger said he was taking his wife and two of his eight children to the island at the invitation of Alaska Gov. William A. Egan, who opposes the test and refused to go himself. The two children are Emily, 9, and Anne, 13.

Heikal Says Die Is Cast Sadat Places Military Under Direct Control

CAIRO, Nov. 5 (UPI)—President Anwar Sadat moved to the headquarters of the high command today to assume direct charge of Egypt's 800,000-man armed forces.

Political sources noted that the late President Nasser made the same move shortly before the war of June, 1967.

Although Mr. Sadat is already supreme commander of Egyptian forces, his new position will put him in effective, day-to-day control, the sources said.

A military communiqué from War Minister and commander-in-chief Gen. Mohammed Ahmad Sadek late yesterday said Mr. Sadat had decided to "assume his command functions" from his headquarters at the high command of the armed forces.

The decision was taken in view of the importance of the political and military situation through which the nation is passing at present.

Political sources in Beirut said Mr. Sadat's move, linked with a series of important simultaneous statements in Egypt, constituted at the least a warning to the world that the Middle East deadlock could not continue.

They said there was considerable anger in Arab quarters at Israeli Premier Golda Meir's speech last week rejecting Egypt's conditions for a reopening of the Suez Canal.

In view of Mr. Sadat's repeated warnings that the problem must be solved this year by peace or war, moves to bring the crisis to a head were inevitable, the sources added.

Other major developments included: The arrival in Cairo of a peace mission of four African heads of state delegates by the Organization of African Unity.

War, Peace Decision A disclosure by Mohammed Hassanein Heikal, editor of the semi-official newspaper Al-Ahram, that Mr. Sadat has already taken a decision on whether to go to war or seek an end to the conflict by peaceful means.

A three-hour meeting between Mr. Sadat and Egypt's top military commanders.

The dispatch of three Iraqi emissaries to Arab states to urge a closing of Arab ranks for a confrontation with Israel.

In an article in today's Al-Ahram, Mr. Heikal said Mr. Sadat's warning that the conflict must be resolved this year meant that a decision on how to resolve it must be taken this year.

He added, "If I am not mistaken, the decision has already been taken in line with Egypt's principles and the requirements of its security."

He did not indicate what the decision was. The African heads of state who flew in tonight were Presidents Leopold Senghor of Senegal and Ahmadou Ahidjo of Cameroon and Gen. Yabum Gowon of Nigeria and Joseph Mobutu of Zaïre (formerly Congo-Kinshasa).

Mr. Senghor, the chairman and spokesman for the group, was quoted as saying, "The mission will formulate practical proposals for a dialogue between Egypt and Israel. These proposals will be drawn up before the UN General Assembly before the war of Middle East later this month."

Mr. Sadat, Vice-President Hussein Shafiq and Premier Mahmoud Fawzi were among high-ranking dignitaries who greeted the peace mission at Cairo Airport.

At a banquet in his guests' honor tonight, Mr. Sadat declared: "The Israeli aggression on (Continued on Page 2, Col. 5)

As Israel Presses for Planes U.S. Intelligence Says Russia Has Cut Arms Flow to Egypt

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5 (NYT)—Soviet shipments of arms and high-performance aircraft to Egypt have dropped off sharply in the last three months, according to American intelligence sources.

The flow of Russian arms, which was extremely heavy in the spring, is reported to have dwindled to a level described by one official as "plentifully low."

The information comes at a time when Israel is pressing the United States to resume the shipments of Phantom and Skyhawk warplanes, shipments that have been suspended since the summer. The United States has been holding back the planes as part of its effort to get negotiations started between Israel and Egypt on an interim peace agreement.

The setback in Soviet shipments was first noted by both American and Israeli intelligence sources.

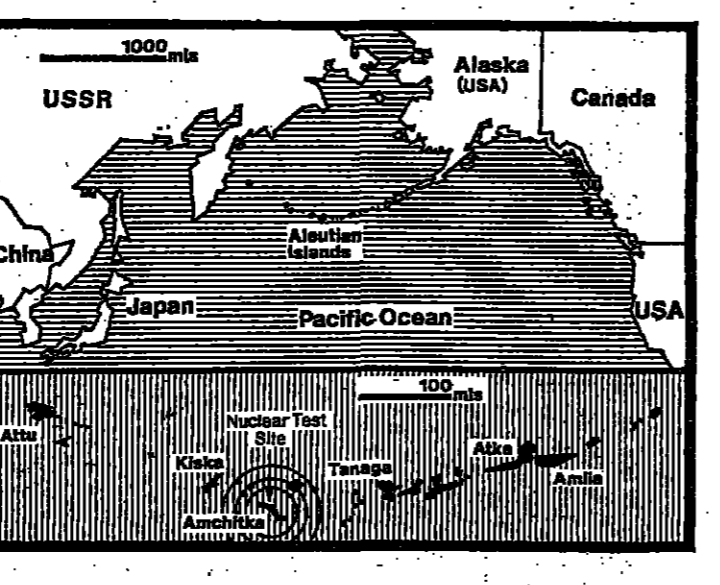

Despite the Israeli government's protests to the contrary, the American officials are convinced that Israel retains military superiority over Egypt, particularly in the air.

From the strategic point of view, the officials said Israel "does not need" additional strike aircraft at this time.

"The Israelis eventually will need additional Phantoms and Skyhawks, to complete the modernization of their air force," one senior planner said, "but for the moment, they are far ahead of Egypt in terms of capability."

However, the officials are quick to concede that the decision on whether to grant the Israeli request for more planes is a political one that is governed by factors beyond the military balance in the area.

PEKING, Nov. 5 (Reuters)—A delegation of Pakistani government and military officials headed by former Foreign Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto arrived here today for consultations with Chinese leaders.

U.S. Planes Pound Trails in Laos SAIGON, Nov. 5 (UPI)—Hundreds of American warplanes pounded North Vietnamese supply lines in Laos today in a major bombing campaign which began shortly before the arrival in Vietnam of Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird Wednesday night.

The U.S. Air Force marshaled its entire Southeast Asia strike force of 80 B-52 bombers for intense raids against the Ho Chi Minh Trail. Hundreds of Thailand-based F-4 Phantoms and F-105 Thunderchiefs joined the strikes into Laos.

New military sources said the U.S. stepped-up raids began Wednesday only hours before Mr. Laird arrived in Saigon for a look at the progress of the Nixon administration's Vietnamization policy and prospects for sharp new reductions in American troop strength.

Besides the Air Force heavy bombers and fighter-bomber strikes, the Navy put the aircraft carrier Constellation into action off the North Vietnamese coast, sending waves of fighter bombers against Laotian targets, the sources said.

The Communists charged last night that Mr. Laird had come to "hatch new plans."

Mrs. Gandhi Rejects Any Move To Pull Troops From Border

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5 (AP)—Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi today firmly rejected any move to withdraw Indian troops from the Pakistan border, and declined to have United Nations observers on Indian territory.

She said that after facing Pakistan aggression twice and Chinese aggression once, it is her duty to see that we are not unprepared.

She said that "we don't really think that to withdraw."

She was speaking at a National Press Club luncheon after two days of White House talks with President Nixon.

She said the troop question merely diverted world attention from the real problems of East Pakistan.

On UN observers, she said India was an open society that anyone could examine along the borders.

She said the question was, "How to bring peace to East Bengal (East Pakistan). If you want the 9.5 million refugees to go back, you must ask: Is it safe? Are you able to insure peace?"

Diplomatic, Military Mission Of Pakistanis Reaches Peking

PEKING, Nov. 5 (Reuters)—A delegation of Pakistani government and military officials headed by former Foreign Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto arrived here today for consultations with Chinese leaders.

Pakistani sources said Mr. Bhutto, leader of the People's party, in West Pakistan, is here as the personal representative of President Mohammed Yahya Khan.

The eight-man delegation, comprising top military leaders and Foreign Ministry officials, was met by Chinese acting Foreign Minister Chi Peng-fei.

Mr. Bhutto, and his delegation began conferring with Premier Zhou Enlai almost immediately after their arrival, according to Pakistani sources.

A Pakistani spokesman said the delegation flew to Peking at the invitation of the Chinese government "for consultation on matters of mutual interest."

Diplomats here speculated that the Pakistani visit could concern, among other things, Peking's strategy at the United Nations.

The military participation in the delegation could also mean discussions regarding China's continuing military aid to Pakistan, and possibly stepping up such aid.

Procedural Chaos Dissuades Synod From Issuing Findings

CHICAGO, Nov. 5 (Reuters)—A confused and divided synod of bishops decided today it would end its five-week session tomorrow without issuing any message to the world's 250 million Roman Catholics.

Documents on the problems of priesthood and internal justice, on which the bishops were hurriedly voting in three tomorrow's closing session, were sent to Pope Paul as a matter of consultation.

The announcement was made at a morning's session by the synod president, John Cardinal Wright.

Synod sources said that it appeared that the documents, the fruit of five weeks of discussion, would not be officially published, although drafts have been informally leaked to the press.

There is little doubt that synod members had been hearing that the results of their deliberations would include messages aimed at all the Roman Catholic faithful and the world, and that the world's major purpose of the synod was to offer encouragement to thousands of Roman Catholics who have doubts about the church in the modern world.

Indian State Menaced by New Cyclone

HEUBANESWAR, India, Nov. 5 (Reuters)—New storm warnings went out today in the cyclone-devastated eastern Indian state of Orissa, but shantiered communities left much of the affected populace unaware of returning danger.

A storm center with winds of about 60 miles an hour, but intensifying, was 250 miles south of Orissa's Paradip port and could hit coastal areas by late tomorrow, the reports warned.

Communications were destroyed in the Cutback and Balasore areas of the state by last weekend's storm and tidal wave that killed at least 10,000—possibly as many as 25,000—persons.

Government ministers admitted that the population there will not know of the approaching storm unless they have radio—an unlikely prospect in view of local poverty and the cyclone devastation.

The main advance in the relief operation was the arrival of transport planes of the Indian Air Force carrying blankets, tents, milk powder and 40 vital radio sets.

Austria's Much-Negotiated Jailbreak

(From Wire Dispatches) VIENNA, Nov. 5.—While their fellow jailbreaker remained in hiding, two escaped convicts resumed tonight the tactic of seizing hostages to use in bargaining with authorities for "safe passage" to freedom. The two were tonight holding a policeman and a girl in a police car they took over, and were bargaining with authorities at a small police station in Vienna's Donaustadt district.

The first five hostages had all been freed, unharmed, and the whereabouts of the three fugitives was unknown earlier today. Then two of them re-emerged tonight with the seizure of the police car, broadcast to their escape demands to headquarters. They were induced by radio appeals to go to the Donaustadt station to negotiate.

The drama began yesterday afternoon when the three convicts—Alfred Nejedly, 24, serving an eight-year term; Walter Schubirsch, 22, doing seven years; and Adolf Schandl, 35, sentenced to ten years—overpowered and disarmed two guards at a prison hearing the three inmates had demanded. They held as hostages the hearing judge, Johann Weiss, police Maj. Franz Hovanietz and a woman clerk as they bar-

Never Blende, After a Year, Cites Achievements and Troubles

By Lewis H. Duguid

SANTIAGO, Nov. 5 (WP).—President Salvador Allende Gossens celebrated his first year in office last night with a speech and outlining Chile's troubles as well as the accomplishments on the road to socialism.

Before a crowd filling the stadium, Mr. Allende said the duty of his revolutionary government was to change social structures but also to maintain order, he said. He added that when Cuban Premier Fidel Castro comes, he will ask him whether Chile has not accomplished more than did Cuba in its first revolutionary year.

Mr. Allende did not announce, as was expected, the date of Mr. Castro's long-awaited visit.

The Marxist president did announce that next Tuesday he will submit to Congress his proposal for doing away with the bicameral Congress in favor of a one-house "Peoples Assembly."

This key clause in the platform of the coalition supporting Mr. Allende is unlikely to be accepted by the Congress, and Mr. Allende would then be under pressure to call a plebiscite on the issue.

He also emphasized Chile's big international debt, saying that each of the nation's 10 million people had a $200 debt abroad. But he gave no hint that the debt would be repudiated, rather asking socialist countries to help carry it forward.

For all the important economic change that Mr. Allende has wrought in his first year of quest for socialism, most Chileans judge him on his political performance. Not many of them are nonpartisan.

Mr. Allende was elected with 36 percent of the vote, and he is probably still a minority president.

The political spectrum here is about as wide as Chile is long, but Mr. Allende probably has accelerated an already rapid shift of its center of gravity toward the left.

In going so, he has also diminished the power of the group to the left of him favoring violent class warfare as the road to socialism. But that group remains active. Those to the right, opposing any socialist or populist changes, have lost much of their political power.

Politics is still played harder and freer in Santiago than anywhere else in the hemisphere, and Mr. Allende has largely maintained the tradition that the conflict be verbal rather than physical.

Bomb Damages Home of British Envoy to Vatican

By Lewis H. Duguid

ROME, Nov. 5 (Reuters).—A bomb exploded on the British Embassy and consular and commercial offices today and wrecked tough security measures for the arrival tonight of Britain's Foreign Secretary, Sir Alec Douglas-Home, following a bomb attack last night on the residence of the British minister to the Vatican.

Police sources said police were acting on the assumption that the blast was the work of Irish Republican Army. The IRA was patrolled in black and white.

The bomb shattered a window minutes after the minister, Lord O'Donnell, who comes from an Irish Protestant family, left a nearby chair. Glass shards were flying across the street.

Delmo Meroyano, 55, who was sitting past at the time of the blast, suffered a broken arm and severe eye and facial injuries.

Sweden Bowing to Solzhenitsyn Presentation

By Lewis H. Duguid

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 5 (UPI).—Sweden's Foreign Ministry said today it will not prevent the Swedish Academy from formally presenting the gold medal and the diploma of the 1970 Nobel Literature prize to Russian novelist Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn at the Swedish Embassy in Moscow.

From the ministry and the academy there are no impediments to presenting the insignia at the ceremony (in Moscow) at a time in forms that may be found in the academy's rules.

Mr. Solzhenitsyn, a nonperson in his native country because of controversial novels, has already received the 400,000 kronor ($100) prize money. The money was deposited in a Swiss bank on his behalf, a Swedish official said.

The Swedish ambassador in Moscow, Gunnar Jarring, earlier said to arrange the prize ceremony in the embassy when Mr. Solzhenitsyn asked for it, according to a book by Norwegian journalist Per Egil Hegge.

Russia Cancels British Tour of Pianist Richter

By Lewis H. Duguid

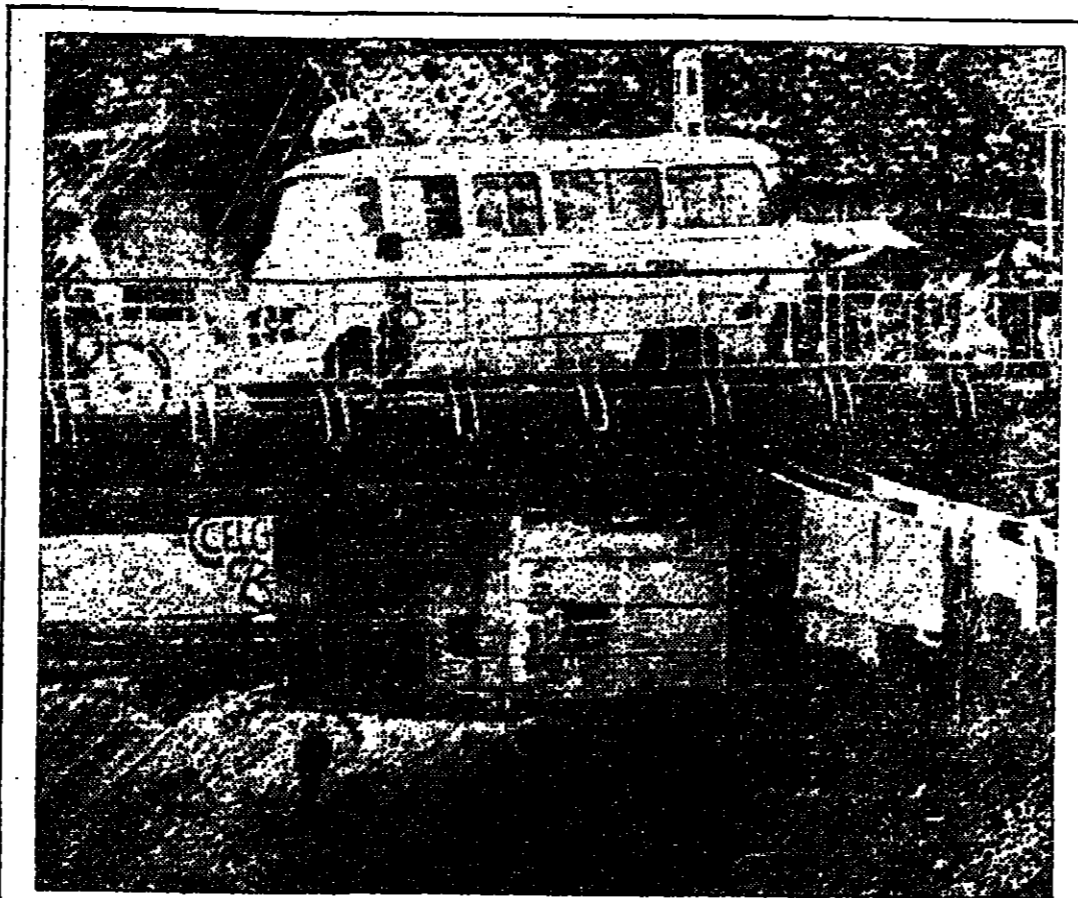

LONDON, Nov. 5 (AP).—The Soviet Union has canceled a tour of Britain by Russian pianist Sviatoslav Richter, bringing to an end all their cultural relations in the field of music, Victor Hochhauser, British impresario, announced today.

The Soviet action was taken in further retaliation over Britain's ouster of 105 Soviet diplomats on spy charges, Mr. Hochhauser said.

The Kremlin previously had canceled a tour of Britain by violinist David Oistrakh.

British officials expressed regret over the cancellations.

Britain banned 105 Soviet diplomatic and trade officials Sept. 24 after a KGB agent defected. The Russians retaliated Oct. 11, ordering four British diplomats out of the country and canceling a projected visit to Moscow next year by Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home.

Guillermo Leon Valencia, Ex-President of Colombia

NEW YORK, Nov. 5 (NYT).—Guillermo Leon Valencia, 62, who served as president of Colombia from 1952 to 1956, died of a heart attack last night at the Belmont Plaza Hotel, where he had taken a room after being stricken outside at 49th Street and Lexington Avenue. Mr. Valencia, who had been staying here at the Drake Hotel, lived in Popayan, Colombia.

A conservative of strong aristocratic convictions, Mr. Valencia entered Colombian politics as a young man and held a variety of government posts in his rise to the presidency.

His flamboyant style made him a rallying figure for the coalition of liberals and conservatives who overthrew Colombian dictator Lt. Gen. Gustavo Rojas-Phyllis in 1958.

Mr. Valencia was a key figure subsequently in the formation of the National Front system, which gives the Colombian electorate a choice of only liberals or only conservatives for president every four years. This system was instituted to end a decade of political strife that had taken more than 30,000 lives.

Mr. Valencia was elected to the presidency with 65 percent of the vote in May, 1962. He initiated a variety of economic and social reforms, sharply reduced inflation and obtained international investments and loans to bolster Colombia's coffee-oriented economy.

His administration maintained close ties with the United States, and this led indirectly to Mr. Valencia's most serious problem in office. In May, 1965, he was obliged to invoke a state of siege in his country in response to bloody student riots protesting American intervention in a crisis in the Dominican Republic.

The following year Mr. Valencia was succeeded by Carlos Lleras Restrepo.

GLENCOVE, L.I., N.Y., Nov. 5 (NYT).—Mrs. Thomas Bancroft, 68, whose thoroughbred racing stable included Damascus, a claimed horse of the year in 1967, died here Wednesday in the Montclair Nursing Home after a long illness.

She was the widow of Thomas M. Bancroft, a textile executive and former president of Mount Vernon Mills, of Baltimore, who died last December.

Mrs. Bancroft, born Edith Woodward, was the eldest daughter of William Woodward Sr., once chairman of the Jockey Club and owner of the famed Selair stud. Her interest in racing began early and continued throughout her life.

Naples 'Wizard' Dies, Noted for His Predictions

ROME, Nov. 5 (AP).—The "Wizard of Naples," who claimed to have cured the ex-queen of Italy from partial blindness and had gained a reputation for his predictions, died last night.

Achille d'Angelo, 64, died of diabetes in poverty in a Rome hospital.

In 1953, the wizard, rejecting accusations of fraud, announced that he had restored vision to former Queen Maria Jose of Savoy.

"Having been called to cure her, I discovered that her optic nerves were atrophied and realized that my psychic fluid could heal her," he said. He asserted that after 10 days of treatment through his "psychic magnetism," the queen regained her sight.

He claimed to be a mind reader and to be able to detect criminals. Born in Campobasso, on the Adriatic, he practiced his profession mostly in Naples.

Rocket Fails Level of Jewish Emigration Up in Russia; 300 in a Week

By Robert G. Kaiser

MOSCOW, Nov. 5 (WP).—In the last week or so, the Soviet government has granted more than 300 exit permits to Jews wishing to emigrate, sources reported today.

The number of exit permissions granted to Soviet Jews may turn out to be substantially higher than 300 in this period, the sources indicated. Precise information is not yet available.

If accurate, these reports mean that Jewish emigration is once again at a relatively high level, and could now reach 10,000 for all of 1971. Semi-official Soviet sources, like the journalist Victor Louis, have hinted at such a figure in the past.

However, the stream of emigrants could be cut off abruptly at any time.

Diplomatic observers who keep track of Jewish emigration believe foreign pressure on the Kremlin is responsible for the relatively large number of Jews now being allowed to leave. Foreign pressure was renewed recently in Canada and France. Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, in France, and Premier Alexei Kosygin, in Canada, got clear impressions of local opinion on the issue of Soviet treatment of Jews.

Potentially the most significant aspect of the permissions granted in the last week or so is that some have been given to professional people with high qualifications. While in Canada, Mr. Kosygin suggested that such people would not be allowed to leave the Soviet Union, and it has long been assumed by foreigners here that this was the case.

One of those given permission to leave this week was J. Nudelman, a surgeon who has been active in the Jewish protest movement. An engineer and a movie director were also given permission to leave recently.

So far in 1971, more than 7,000 Jews have emigrated from the Soviet Union to Israel. The largest number in a single month—about 1,500—was allowed to leave in April, apparently in conjunction with the Communist party congress. The number fell off after that and was at a low point of about 500 a month in July and August.

A theory explaining the relative liberalism of Soviet emigration policy recently is circulating in the diplomatic community here. According to the theory—based on political gossip of uncertain reliability—Soviet hardliners held sway last May, when they staged the trial of Leningrad Jews accused of hijacking an airplane, and dictated the harsh sentences they received. The hardliners' intention, the theory continues, was to scare Jewish dissidents into silence and obedience. When that failed—and even backfired, because of the worldwide outcry against the harsh Leningrad sentences—the hardliners lost out to a more moderate element, the theory goes on. These moderates are responsible for allowing the rate of emigration to again reach a high level, if this theory is correct.

Signal Starts One Of Two Satellites Launched by U.S.

By Robert G. Kaiser

CAPE KENNEDY, Nov. 5 (AP).—Ground controllers last night revived one of two U.S. military communications satellites that had not operated since their launch last Tuesday.

Air Force officials said that the second satellite still was not responding to signals. But the awakening of one meant at least part of the $44-million mission was salvaged.

The twin payloads, intended to link the Pentagon with America's worldwide military installations, were lofted into stationary orbits 22,300 miles above the Pacific by a Titan-3 rocket.

The Air Force said that it expected the revived satellite to be able to perform normal communications relay duties after a test period.

With one satellite functioning, only one-third of the globe would be covered by the new stationary communications system, instead of the planned two-thirds.

Top Gaullist Quits Party Over Policy

By Robert G. Kaiser

PARIS, Nov. 5 (AP).—Longtime Gaullist Jean-Marcel Jeanneney resigned from the party today to protest against policies of the government of President Georges Pompidou.

Mr. Jeanneney, a minister under Gen. de Gaulle, complained about policy toward Europe, internal reform and family and fiscal policy.

In an article in the newspaper Le Monde announcing his resignation, Mr. Jeanneney said that French policy aimed at strengthening the Common Market and adding new members would destroy ties among the ECC.

Rightist Youths Destroy Picasso Works in Spain

By Robert G. Kaiser

MADRID, Nov. 5 (UPI).—Armed rightist youths tonight ransacked a Madrid art gallery that was staging an exhibition in honor of Pablo Picasso and destroyed 24 works by the exiled Spanish painter.

Gallery owner Elvira Mignoni said that one of the youths held a gallery attendant at knifepoint while six others poured acid over 24 of 26 Picasso engravings. She estimated the loss at more than $85,700.

The raiders, calling themselves "Commandos of the Anti-Marxist Struggle," left behind leaflets praising Generalissimo Francisco Franco and calling Picasso a "Marxist, Communist party militant, anti-patriot, homosexual, pornographer and bastard."

Police said that they were looking for the vandals. Earlier this week, three Madrid bookstores that were selling politically liberal literature were ransacked by youths who left similar leaflets behind.

ART Exhibitions in Paris, London, Rome

Paris

Léger, Grand Palais, Paris 8, to Jan. 10.

Over 350 works covering the whole career of Fernand Léger beginning with some of his earliest paintings (a portrait of his uncle, a typical Norman parish priest reminds one of his rural background) and going through the cubist period to the very repetitious period of the years after the war. There is a certain lightness and unpretentiousness in the cubist style that is later crushed by Léger's socially edifying intentions.

Léger, Espace Pierre Cardin, 3 Avenue Gabriel, Paris 8, to Jan. 3.

Inaugurating his new exhibition rooms in the same building as his theater (the ex-Théâtre des Ambassadeurs), Pierre Cardin is displaying a collection of drawings and gouache sketches for sets and costumes by Léger. Among them those for Darius Milhaud's ballet "La Création du Monde" based on an African theme. Honnegger's "Skating Rink," Rietz's "David Triumphant" and Milhaud's "L'Éclair" also some gold jewels designed by Nadia Léger, the painter's wife.

Drawings From the Darmstadt Museum, Cabinet de Dessins, Pavillon de Flore, Louvre, Paris, to Jan. 3.

This selection of 100 drawings from the Darmstadt Museum's collection of over 8,000 contains some works of unusual interest such as an ink drawing by Urs Graf and a skeleton rider by Rembrandt) but mostly the material from the Italian, German, French, and Lowlands schools is either rather derivative, without being unattractive, or rather boringly competent.

René Char, Musée d'Art Moderne de la Ville de Paris, entrance provisionally on the Quai de New York, Paris 16, to Nov. 29.

This exhibition which was organized by the Maeght Foundation is devoted in part to the manuscripts and illustrated editions of books by the poet René Char, and in part to the artists who have illustrated his poetry. Among them: Giacometti, de Staël, Vieira da Silva, Braque, Lam, Brauner, etc. Numerous paintings and drawings by these artists are also shown.

Miró, Galerie Maeght, 13 Rue de Téhéran, Paris 8, paintings to Nov. 12, drawings to Dec. 6.

About 100 drawings and paintings (1963-1971) on various sorts of paper show that Miró is consistently producing the sort of work in which an easy humor blends with a free handed aestheticism. He readily uses any kind of material, including the Sunday tabloids to paint on. At 78 his entirely characteristic graphic talent is still productive.

London

Martinez Novillo, New Grafton Gallery, 14 Grafton St., London W.1, to Nov. 24.

One of Spain's best-known landscape artists, Martinez Novillo does oils of Castile and the Valencian beaches, work hitherto seldom seen in England. In this first London one-man show, he demonstrates the Spanish tradition of landscape at its rich and fiery best.

James Lloyd, Portal Gallery, 16a Grafton St., London W.1, to Nov. 14.

Farmland, patrolman, gasworks stoker, bus conductor,

A Fernand Léger drawing for "La Création du Monde," among works currently on view at Espace Cardin, Paris.

builder's laborer, lamplighter, James Lloyd was 40 before he had the overwhelming urge to paint pictures. These he does with meticulous care, using a kind of personal petit pointillism to portray these places, people and things that he has most closely experienced. His paintings may be naive in technique, but in thought and in composition, he has the natural gifts of a master. His work is enchanting.

—MAX WYKES-JOYCE

Rome

Scrittura-Pittura, Nine Roman Artists, Contini, 25 Piazza Mignanelli, Rome, to Nov. 15.

"Writing-Painting" is a timely and poetic show in which Novelli excels. His "Lancia Design" is literally a machine that flings drawings is just that. Drawn in pen and pencil on canvas, it spurs a host of commas, dots, symbols, a forest of little growths toward the upper edge of the picture—minute "evil things" as if from Pandora's box. There is a secret pulse and order in his lyrical abandon. A row of vases, loose, black and white meshes by Bigli, perfectly abstract but eloquent, are also intriguing. Baruchello's tiny mechanisms are delicately drawn on wide expanses of pale canvas. Leinardi shows unending juxtapositions of the letter O. Twombly, one of the leading graffiti writers, could have been represented with finer works. Schifano's and Koumellis' "initials" with drips are from these two artists' best periods. Weller has not yet captured children's calligraphy and, so far, uses it only as a decorative device.

Objects of My Affection, Man Ray, Condotti, 88 Via Condotti, Rome, through November.

Man Ray's "Objects of My Affection" become objects of the viewer's affection as well. The famous metronome ticks away at enigmatically as ever; the magical smoking device is ready to take you to Aladdin's cave; a snow-storm has an eye in it and no snow, the leaf of French bread was surely cast in bronze long before Jasper John's beer can. Man Ray's objects of inscrutable fantasy are as classic as Duchamp's. However, recent lithographs add little to the old dada enchantment.

Ben, Corille, 51 Babuino, Rome, to Nov. 20.

It is surprising that Ben (Vandenberg) has never been shown in Rome before. His hilarious white motifs painted or printed on black are the trutht of a grown-up child who writes on the blackboard of art. To wit, "Speak of me Ben." "I have signed plants in 1964" with a real potted plant growing from a shelf off the canvas. Inventions, juxtapositions, Ben's pronouncements, like those of Klein and Manzoni, are among the best that neo dada has to offer.

Alan Davie, Oca, 38 Oca, Rome to Nov. 15.

Alan Davie tells a story similar to Ben's in a different language. He too is a sophisticated innocent. He seems to become more carefree each year, but in these splashy, bright, intentionally awkward gouaches of 1970, also more profound. He is digging up symbols from a far Jungian past, which each of us feels but never knows.

These four exhibitions have one thing in common: They are not explicit. They say with art what cannot be put into words.

DANCE Paris Festival on New T With Americans, Indones

PARIS, Nov. 5 (AP)—The Paris Dance Festival is taking off in some uncustomed directions this week and next, both in form and content. Instead of its usual formula of a more-or-less traditional spectacle de ballets in the reassuring confines of the Théâtre des Champs-Élysées, the festival is offering a marathon program of three companies in the relatively remote Théâtre de la Cité Internationale.

And the distance from the central Avenue Montaigne to the peripheral Boulevard Jourdan is hardly more than the cultural gap between the first-night Paris audience (what there was of it) and a program that included a traditional Indonesian group, preceded and followed by two small American companies energetically cultivating their own sectors of the contemporary dance landscape.

The two American troupes—the Viola Farber Dance Company and Twyla Tharp and Dancers—share a prodigious energy and a certain sense of humor that seem to be the common property of many otherwise different American groups.

Miss Farber formed her own troupe, composed here of four women and three men, after several years with Merce Cunningham, to whose influence she has added an element of improvisation that must make some strenuous demands on the imaginations of her colleagues.

First Piece

"Co-op," the first of three pieces—all without music—showed off many facets of the troupe. Each of the dancers made up and taught to the others a section of this dance, and the dancers all have periods of improvisation, but the overall structure is strictly controlled by Miss Farber—in a firm voice from the sidelines. The result was a kaleidoscopic succession of unexpected poses and movements, interspersed with spoken remarks and Dadaist events. Toward the end, one of the girls came to the front of the stage and called sweetly, "Tom, Tom." Tom was asked to come up and give a spot critique of "Co-op," which indeed he proceeded to do before being cut off by the abrupt ending.

The Farber program began at 6:30 p.m. and was succeeded at about 7:45 by the Sunds Ballet of West Java, which transformed the theater into another world—one of lapidary precision and restraint. The Indonesian dancers presented a cross-section of traditional dances, some in slightly modernized form, deriving from legends and ceremonies, stylized combats and historical tales, the whole accompanied by a native ensemble of percussion and wind instruments.

Some time after 9 the spectators trekked from the theater to the gallery, a large gymnasium-like hall where Twyla Tharp—a slight, dark-haired, intense young woman—tried to brace them for what they were about to see and encourage them to move around and ferret dances from angles.

Miss Tharp seems concerned with form content. For instance, she was originally meant to be a great distance placed, but in the soundings she lost it to move around anyway in the light around dancer. Six dancers went out in two rows, a spotlight. A deafening of a Torelli concerto by each dancer punctuated sically with appropriate references and a violence. The benches rilled around the 4 to get an overall view between the dancers for Free Farber!

The program proper piano rolls to jazz music at all, with a of movement that mediocre physical effort seemed closer exercise than to a school of dance.

By 11 p.m., the sur variously amused, baffled or irritable representative of the paper, France-Soleil some in finding Miss Tharp's troupe, "Incubator," Miss Tharp's troupe, "Incubator," Le Monde, Claude Devoted long and reviews to each of the groups. At the very Paris festival has been from its routine of it and that is somewhat "The three troupes (the Cité Universitaire with different program following week the festival to the Théâtre de Elysées with the Ballet Company of Israel.

William Lawson's Light Scotch Whisky was first enjoyed over 120 years ago by people who should know more about Scotch than anyone.

The Scots themselves. So it shouldn't surprise you to find that its light and mellow taste goes down splendidly with your friends. Remember they've never had anything like William Lawson's Light Scotch before. Maybe they're just making up for lost time.

The Endowment for the Arts has come up with some beautiful answers. Nancy Hanks, its chairman, with typical succinctness, approached the first part of the problem this way.

ART MARKET The Fashion for Snuff Bottles

By Souren Melikian LONDON (IET).—Snuff came to be known in China in the late 16th century after the fashion had spread in Europe. It is often assumed that the Portuguese introduced it through their colony at Macao.

Soon the force of fashion was such that the Chinese emperors took to snuff—the gift of a snuff bottle became an accepted form of courtesy. Collections were formed. An adviser to Emperor Ch'ien Lung (1736-1795) is said to have owned 2,300 snuff bottles.

Cunning Chinese dealers, imitating the finest milk glass and porcelain wares, probably had the mark inscribed on the base of the imitation bottles, says one Chinese scholar whose arguments are now accepted by such writers as Lilla S. Perry.

Photography is also most spectacularly used in a kind of prologue to the exhibition. The classic great hall, columns and staircase of the Corcoran museum are flooded with the changing images of slide projections and movie films, transforming the area into eight panoramas of rock cliffs, desert, grasslands, forest, jungle and, most stunningly, a great waterfall tumbling down the broad staircase.

Whether masterly or not, these objects have an easy appeal owing to their material and small size. Until recently, they were the private mania of a few collectors. But all that has changed as doubtless the snuff bottle sale at Christie's in London on Nov. 15 will demonstrate.

The Change

The change came around 1965. Few people have done as much to foster interest in snuff bottles as Hugh M. Moss of London, the son of Sydney Moss, the famous dealer in Chinese art. When Hugh Moss was a young man with little money to invest, he explored new fields of Far Eastern art only to discover that snuff bottles were very much neglected as a collector's item in Europe.

contemplate. The magazine first appeared in 1966; it was carefully produced on a fine, glossy paper, and lavishly illustrated. For the first time, potential collectors had a chance of finding detailed documentation in an accessible form.

This and a few other factors, such as the dwindling market, gave the snuff bottle a boost. At the last Grosvenor House Antiques Dealers' Fair in June, Mr. Moss could show, with justifiable pride, a window full of his little bottles. He said then that over the past three years business and financiers, with no special knowledge of Chinese art, had become avid snuff-bottle collectors.

The London salesrooms have reflected this growing interest. Specialized sales of snuff bottles were held for the first time at Christie's in 1969. On June 14 of this year, Christie's auctioned the Ko family collection of bottles collected in China from 1920 to 1943. The catalogue is a valuable art booklet, with 190 entries, each of them illustrated.

Datings are, however, still vague. For example, enameled opaque glass bottles have no other dating than a general subtitle stating that they were made "circa 1750-1800." The last lot in the sale, an enamel bottle from Canton, was described as "... blue Ch'ien mark and probably of the period."

The sale Tuesday of miniatures at Christie's (IET, Oct. 30-31) saw the portrait of Dudley, 3d Lord North, by Isaac Oliver, sold for £10,500. This was considerably under the world record price of £65,100 for a miniature of Frances Howard, Countess of Essex and Somerset, also by Oliver. The Lord North miniature brought the highest price in the sale—with other prices ranging below the £2,400 mark. The Victoria and Albert Museum was the successful bidder, at £235 for a miniature of Katherine Whitmore.

Italian Police Recover Six Stolen Paintings

CROTONE, Italy, Nov. 5 (UPI).—Italian police, apparently acting on a tip from Scotland Yard, today recovered six valuable paintings stolen 21 months ago from a village church in southern Italy. Police said the paintings by 17th-century artist Mattia Preti were found along with other art works at the home of land surveyor Diego Pisanì, 35. They said Pisanì was arrested. The raid came one week after British police found four stolen paintings, including two Preti works, in the baggage deposit of London's Euston Station. Italian-born barman Gian Carlo Molo, 28, and a 24-year-old woman were arrested in connection with that discovery. Today's recoveries left only two of the Preti paintings still unaccounted for. Ten were stolen Feb. 25 last year from St. Dominica's Church in Taverna, a village 35 miles west of Crotone.

THE WASTE LAND By T. S. Eliot. A facsimile of the original drafts including annotations of Ezra Pound. Edited and with an Introduction by Valerie Eliot. Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovich $22.50.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard. It has long been common knowledge that when T. S. Eliot finished the first draft of "The Waste Land," he gave it to Ezra Pound to read and Pound persuaded him to discard at least half of it. Pushing over this, I once asked Milton Koblinsky, a poet who is a friend of mine, what he supposed Pound had cut away. "All of Eliot's own lines," was his answer and there is a very truth in it. Now that the original manuscript, which was presumed to be lost, has reappeared, complete with both Eliot's and Pound's annotations, we can see the aptness of the remark. The quotations, paraphrases, evocations and echoes from all the sources cited in the numerous notes to the poem form its skeleton. What Pound ruthlessly excised was pure Eliot. He crossed out long passages in which Eliot was experimenting with a conception of dramatic poetry in which several voices contributed to a polyphonic effect. The poem had begun with a long prose recitative about prehistoric pub-crawling. Sandwiched between ardas, there was a page and a half of brittle couplets in which a woman called Precia functions somewhat like the Elizabethan clown to relieve the atmosphere with levity. There was an apostrophe to London: "London, the swarming life you kill and breed/Rounded between the concrete and the sky..." and a parable on Highbury: "Highbury bore me. Highbury's children/Flayed under green trees and in the dusty park." In "Death by Water" we are treated to a long passage in which sailors run aground on reefs of blank verse, complete with "gaff-jaws," "garboard-strake" and "galeet." A dirge about one drowned Elizabeth includes these lines: "That is lace that was his nose. (Jones peep through the ragged toes)..." In the discarded "Death of Saint Narcissus," "His eyes were aware of the pointed corners of his eyes and his hands aware of the tips of his fingers." Narcissus was sure that he had been a tree, then a fish, a young girl and finally "A Dancer to God." The poem originally finished out not in "Shantih shantih shantih," but in this: "I am the husband and the wife/And the victim and the sacrificial knife/I am the fire, and the butter also." One could go on, but it's not fair. It was a first draft, after all, and Eliot had put it together—out of old fragments and new material—in the space of several weeks while he was having something like a nervous breakdown in Switzerland. The Eliot who had already written "The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock" and "Portrait of a Lady" would certainly have had the taste to cut most of what Pound did. Just as he gave up his attempts at poetic drama in "Sweeney Agonistes," one feels sure that he would have recognized the unworkability of the "dramatic" structure of this first draft. "Prufrock" and "Portrait of a Lady" were relatively modest in scope; in "The Waste Land," Eliot had taken on the world—and just at the time when the world was too much with him. In his poor health, he surrendered to the

Nicklaus Scores Under-Par 62

Jack Nicklaus swept into the lead in the 10th round of the 1971 Australian Open golf tournament today with a 10-under-par 62 on a 28-hole total of 181. A number of strokes ahead of the nearest challenger, Australian Bruce Crampton, who finished at 69.

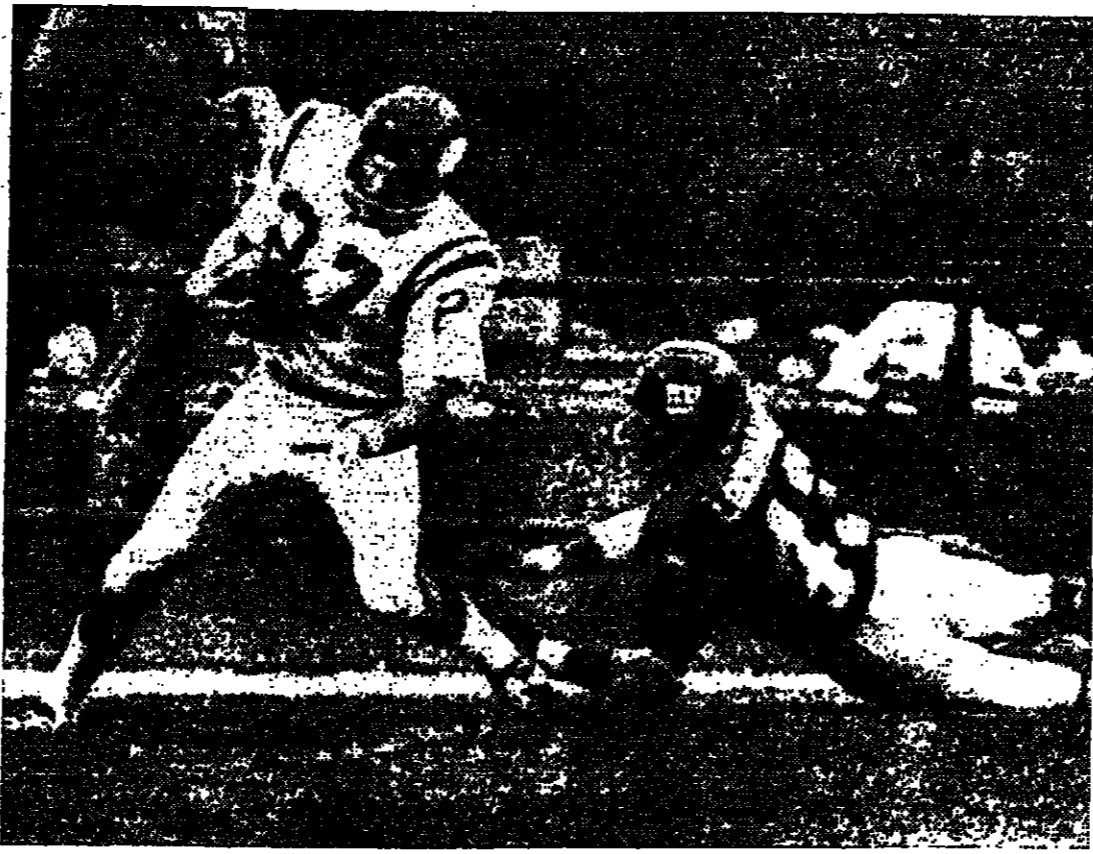

Conditions were perfect for the big-hitting Nicklaus, who only once failed to reach the green in the regulation figure on the 180-yard, 18th hole where he had a bogey 4 after landing in a sand trap. A crowd of 5,000 followed the 31-year-old Nicklaus around the 6,642-yard course, roaring approval on every shot. Nicklaus said, "I've never been so far under par in the opening section of any competition round. Conditions were great."

Though the course is well grassed, the ground is hard and Nicklaus was having no trouble driving more than 300 yards. Nicklaus has scored 62 on three previous competitions—once in Australia and twice in the United States. "I've never seen a course playing so easily, though this doesn't detract from Jack's great round."

Player described his own 62 as "not very good." It put him at 143 and outside the first 10. While he partnered with New Zealand countryman Papwa Sewgobind in a move by sponsors to avoid any criticism that the golfers were being kept apart. Though police have been guarding the players, no anti-apartheid demonstrations have been held.

First-round leader Australian Geoff Smart faded to 144 with a second round of 76. David Graham of Australia and Terry Kendall of New Zealand were tied for third at 140. Graham posted a second-round 70 and Kendall had a 68 today.

Rematch of 1970 Playoff Game Vikings vs. 49ers in Sack the QB

By Kenneth Denlinger BLOOMINGTON, Minn., Nov. 5 (UPI)—Front four are measured by body counts, and the leader in the sack-the-quarterback derby at midseason in the National Football Conference is neither of the well known groups from Minnesota or Los Angeles. It is the former pacifist bloc from San Francisco, the 49ers. Yes, John Brodie's team is playing defense—and well. In seven games, the 49ers have dumped quarterbacks ranging in talent from Roman Gabriel to Jim Plunkett to Pete Liske 29 times. In the entire 14-game season last year they managed only 30 sacks.

Preview of NFL Games

But the Browns have gone into a slump since beating Cincinnati in the last minute three weeks ago. Two weeks ago they were upset by Denver in a 27-0 rout.

MY Marriage Contract

WASHINGTON.—The chief steward of the "Christina" Aristotle Onassis yacht has just written a book in which he says that Mr. Onassis and his wife, the former Jacqueline Kennedy, signed a marriage contract with 170 clauses in it.

Buchwald

It provides for the following, among other things: I have to spend half the year with my wife (she tried to hold out for seven months). This time can be broken up any way I want it.

If Mrs. Onassis were to leave Mr. Onassis, she would receive a lump sum of $18 million under the terms of the alleged contract.

A spokeswoman for Mrs. Onassis categorically and unequivocally denied that such a marriage contract exists and called the story nonsense.

I have no knowledge of whether such a contract does exist and shall leave Mr. Onassis and his ex-steward to fight that one out.

But I do know that marriage contracts, particularly in Europe, are not uncommon, and as a matter of fact since both my wife and I were living in Paris when
